Tornado cleanup in Beaver Crossing, Nebraska.

COMMENTS FROM SURVIVORS assisted by Rapid Response teams

The labor of love you provided for us and our community farmers in cleaning up our fields after the tornado was appreciated beyond what our words can express.—NE

Thank you so very much for your work of faith and love that you spared my family. Your team cut trees down and loaded debris from the tornado damage. I could not believe how hard they worked for us. We cannot thank you enough.—AR

We are so thankful for the help we received from your Christian organization. Seeing Christians volunteering to help their fellowman is a positive reflection on us all! Your help renews our faith in God.—CO

Thank you to these amazing and very skilled men who jumped into action and cut down trees and cleared brush and debris like we have never seen done before. These fine men showed us all what compassion for others and hard work can do.—WI

What is Rapid Response Services?

RAPID RESPONSE SERVICES, a program of Christian Aid Ministries (CAM), offers cleanup services to individuals and communities affected by natural disasters. Rapid Response teams have been established in various locations in the U.S. to facilitate quick response to disasters. Each team is made up of local believers who are ready to respond when needs arise. We have teams available to respond to any area of the United States struck by flooding, tornadoes, wildfires, or other disasters.

The goal of a Rapid Response team is to move into a community to investigate damages within 24 hours after a disaster strikes. Within 48 hours or less, they bring volunteers into the area to help with preliminary cleanup such as cutting up trees, removing debris, cleaning out flooded houses, and installing tarps on damaged roofs. The projects generally last several days and sometimes up to three weeks. If it seems necessary, CAM's Disaster Response Services (DRS) will follow up with a longer-term rebuilding project.

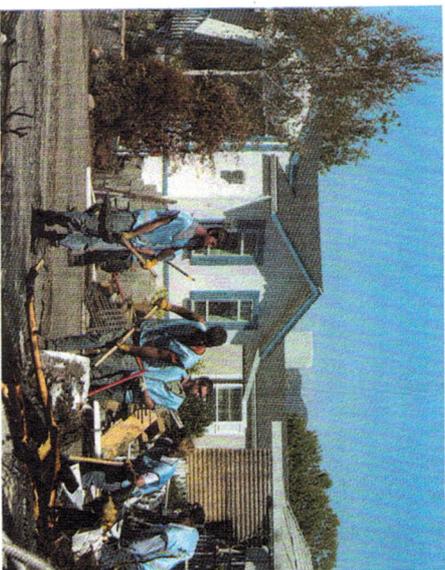

The purpose of Rapid Response is to demonstrate our faith in Christ by reaching out to survivors of natural disasters. As people observe the lives and actions of Rapid Response volunteers, we want them to see Jesus. Since we profess to know and love Jesus, our daily lives should demonstrate that. As Christians, we have a responsibility to show the world a faith that works (James 2:20).

Ice storm cleanup in Crossville, Tennessee.

Your team worked tirelessly

like the locusts in Exodus 10:12-19, cleaning everything in their path. A blessing we don't get to see very often these days. Proof that God is still at work. —TN
